Abstract

The Fred S. Piper Collection consists of two main components: (1) a cataloged collection of more than 330 published books and bibliographies by, about, or related to nineteenth-century American writer and philosopher Henry David Thoreau (1817-1862); and (2) uncataloged materials that include additional monographs and bibliographies about Thoreau, as well as related correspondence, periodicals, clippings, images, and ephemera. A small subset of the uncataloged material is focused on the life of Thoreau's English biographer Henry S. Salt (1851-1939).

The collection was donated to Cary Memorial Library in 1961 by Dr. Piper (1867-1962), a Lexington resident, physician, and Thoreau enthusiast. The library continued to add material to the collection until the year 2000.

Biographical History

Dr. Fred S. Piper (1867-1962), was a native of rural New Hampshire and a long-time resident of Lexington, Massachusetts. He worked briefly as a public school teacher and then at a pharmacy before entering the Boston University School of Medicine in 1887. In 1897 he moved his seven-year family medical practice from Hillsboro, NH, to Lexington, MA. His familiarity with medicinal herbs broadened into a lifelong, avid interest in botany, which led him to study plants at home and abroad and to keep a record of more than 300 wildflowers. He admired the distinguished botanist Asa Gray, whose Manual of the Botany of the Northern United States had encouraged Henry David Thoreau's interest in botany. Dr. Piper was also a skilled photographer and carpenter and a passionate collector of books on a wide variety of subjects, including philosophy, literature, astronomy, and geology. In addition to his Thoreau collection, he owned a large collection of books by and about Walt Whitman.

In 1881 Dr. Piper married Mabel Marion Scott, who gave birth to their daughter, Dorothy Gertrude, in 1893. The couple divorced in 1897, and Dr. Piper married Grace Elise Judkins in 1900. Their son, Randolph Piper, was born in 1906. Dorothy Piper married Walter Herbert Neaves in 1913.

Some of Dr. Piper's activities and affiliations included the following:

- Election to Lexington School Committee, 1902.
- Instructor in Theory and Practice of Medicine, Boston University School of Medicine, 1906-1910.
- President, Lexington Historical Society, 1909-1910.
- Member, committee for the revision of the Bi-Centenary Edition (1913) of Charles Hudson's History of the Town of Lexington. Dr. Piper wrote some of the revised material, prepared all of the illustrations, and supervised the work at the Riverside Press.
- President, Lexington Field and Garden Club, 1917-1918.
- Among his activities in Freemasonry: Order of Knighthood in Gethsemane No. 35, Newtonville, Mass, Knight of Malta, January 23, 1906. Scottish Rite degrees in Boston, October 1916. Life membership in Boston Council, Royal and Select Masters, November 18, 1919. Degrees and life membership in Aleppo Temple, AAON Mystic Shrine, December 30, 1919.
- Associate Medical Examiner, Fourth Middlesex District of Massachusetts, December 28, 1927.

In addition to these activities, Dr. Piper was the first Vice President of the Thoreau Society, an international society based in Concord, MA, dedicated to the life, writing, and legacy of Henry David Thoreau. He was elected in 1942, one year after the society's founding.

Related Collections

The Thoreau Institute in Lincoln, MA, and the Concord Free Public Library in Concord, MA, hold extensive and complementary collections of books and archival materials related to Henry David Thoreau. Among the most relevant to the Fred S. Piper collection are the Raymond Adams and Walter Harding collections at the Thoreau Institute and the Henry David Thoreau papers and the collection of books from Thoreau's library at the Concord Free Public Library. Harding's collection contains a fragment of wood from Thoreau's cabin given to him by Dr. Piper.

Provenance

Dr. Piper donated his collection to the Cary Memorial Library on August 16, 1961. For nearly forty years after the donation, the library staff accepted additional donations and actively sought new publications about Thoreau to add to the collection. The practice ended around the time of a major renovation of the library building in 2000, when the collection was moved to storage. Books, periodicals, and other items published after Piper's death in June 1962 are known to have been added by the library, as are a copy of Joseph Hosmer's Concord Freeman: Thoreau Annex and an LP of a WBZ Radio program on the environmental conditions at Walden Pond. However, there may be some library additions that were undocumented and are consequently unidentified here. The majority of the collection is believed to be Dr. Piper's original donation.

Scope and Content of the Collection

The collection includes correspondence, books, pamphlets, periodicals, clippings, manuscripts, photographs, sketches, and ephemera containing content primarily about the life and writing of nineteenth-century author, philosopher, naturalist, and Concord native Henry David Thoreau (1817-1862). Other, closely related, subjects include Thoreau's friend and mentor Ralph Waldo Emerson, the site of Walden Pond, where Thoreau lived for two years in a cabin of his own construction, and events commemorating Thoreau and Concord, MA.

Although Dr. Piper's collection at one time included some artifacts and a complete set of first editions of the writings of Thoreau, the current collection contains few first editions and no original Thoreau manuscripts or artifacts. The focus is on books, articles, and poetry written about or inspired by Thoreau. There also is a small collection of material honoring the life and work of Thoreau's English biographer Henry S. Salt (1851-1939).

Series 1. Cataloged book collection

The cataloged book collection consists of over 330 books and bibliographies by, about, or related to Henry David Thoreau. Nearly half of the books in the series contain the writings of Thoreau, though only two of these were published during Thoreau's lifetime: Elizabeth Peabody's 1849 Aesthetic Papers, containing Thoreau's lecture "Resistance to Civil Government," and the 1853 poetry collection Thalatta: A Book for the Seaside, containing Thoreau's poem "My life is like a stroll." Items not by Thoreau are primarily about Thoreau's life and writings. Items in this series have been cataloged by the library and are housed separately from the rest of the collection. They can be found in the library's catalog by searching for items with "PIPER" in the Dewey call number.

Series 2. Material related to Henry David Thoreau

This series represents the bulk of uncataloged materials and includes books and articles about Thoreau and closely related subjects, as well as bibliographies, images, manuscripts, and ephemera.

2A. Monographs

This subseries consists of a small collection of books, pamphlets, and one phonograph about Thoreau and related subjects. They are arranged alphabetically by creator or by title where creator is unknown.

A complete list is provided as Appendix A. See also the cataloged book collection in Series 1 and the Thoreau Society Booklets in Series 2B.

1.1-1.4	Uncataloged monographs (A-O)	1880-1954, undated
2.1-2.3	Uncataloged monographs (P-W)	1882-1962, undated

2B. Periodicals and clippings

This subseries contains a variety of newspapers, newsletters, journals, magazines, and clippings primarily from the 1930s to 1950s. Articles about Thoreau's life and writing predominate. Other content includes poetry, reviews of books and music about Thoreau, a few depictions of Thoreau in illustrations and advertisements, and articles on Emerson, Walden, the Thoreau Society, and other relevant subjects. Of particular interest is an original copy of the 1862 Atlantic Monthly in which Thoreau's essay "Walking" was first published. In addition, the November 5, 1933, issue of the New York Herald Tribune Books features a letter to the editor by Dr. Piper and a response by the criticized reviewer, Burton Rascoe (page 20). Among the reviews are several of Henry Seidel Canby's 1939 Thoreau biography. Full issues are arranged chronologically by periodical. Reprints and clippings are arranged chronologically, with the exception of clippings from the Concord Journal, which are filed chronologically with the full issues of that newspaper.

For additional details, including an itemized list of reprints and clippings, see Appendix B.

2C. Bibliographies and catalogs

This subseries contains scholarly bibliographies, library and collection catalogs, booklists, and bookseller's catalogs listing materials of relevance to the study of Henry David Thoreau. The bookseller's catalogs include Goodspeed's catalog number 214 with a handwritten list of "Thoreau items" corresponding to a list of Thoreau's editions in a letter from Raymond Adams dated April 11, 1932 (See Adams correspondence in Series 3) and a catalog published by Ye Bibliophile containing an annotated version of Raymond Adams's Thoreau checklist. Bibliographies and catalogs are arranged alphabetically by creator.

Series 3. Fred S. Piper correspondence

Dr. Piper's correspondence reveals his interest in sharing articles, books, and ideas about Thoreau with others. Recurring topics include new publications about Thoreau, rare books available for purchase, the Thoreau collections of Piper and others, and the passing of the English Thoreau biographer Henry S. Salt. Roughly half of the correspondence is from Raymond Adams, a professor of English and influential Thoreau scholar, who was the first and long-time president of the Thoreau Society. There are also small collections of extended correspondence from Thoreau scholar and bibliographer Walter Harding, fellow Thoreau enthusiast Helen Packard, and Henry S. Salt. Items are arranged chronologically by correspondent.

Series 4. Material about Henry S. Salt

Dr. Piper's small collection of material honoring the life of Henry S. Salt contains biographical articles in vegetarian magazines and other periodicals, a bibliography prepared by Raymond Adams, a remembrance by the wife of John Davies, and a typescript of Salt's funeral speech, written by Salt himself. Salt was a Socialist, a pacifist, a vegetarian, and an advocate for animal rights, as well as a literary biographer. He was also a friend and great admirer of Mahatma Ghandi, who credited Salt's book A Plea for Vegetarianism with convincing him of the moral basis of vegetarianism. Salt's Life of Henry David Thoreau is mentioned only in passing in most of the material.
